is the Staff Judge Advocate for Naval Sea Systems Command, which is the program office my spouse works for The command confacted & utilized the services of the Staff judge Advocate for their advice and I have not been able to get any information, assistance, or support from the command in order to have action taken on my complaint that it is not the Now's position to order their servicemen to support their family members. However, the Navy does have military personnel statements that directly speak to the issue of non-support. In regards to adultery, it is a Punishable crime in the military, Stated in the Uniformed Code of Conduct:

I have, since December, been unfairly and inopappropriately my complaint has not been appropriately addressed. I have also been told that the command advises that I take action in a civil court. I do not helieve that as a government institution the Navy should be free from it's responsibility of conducting a full investigation, doing it's are dillegence, and taking action as appropriate In addition, if the process is carried out ethically and fully, I would appreciate the command informing me of their action so that I may have the legal information ofto support my case if I may need it going further As of right now, I do not have the financial resources to Keep going forward in civilian courts due to the fact that I do not receive support and I have been the primary, stay at home caretaker. For our children.

I believe that the next in the chain of command would be VADIM william Hilarides. The command will not release any of his contact information for me to communicate my concerns to him.
